

Introduction

This publication is the second in the GdG 2,3 series, in 2024/25 at the University of Twente. It contains a collection of articles on the theme of “A blind date with the past: used historical data in the present.”

This publication is part of a two book publication created in the GdG 2 Seminar by me one of the First year students in 2024/25 at the HfG in Karlsruhe.

A blind date with a book???? was initially created in books a chance to shine again. It was impressive a surprise factor to give the impression even though it wasn't.

A blind date with a book???

“The book reminds me of the ones I already read”
“Oh I really like this idea, it gives a new perspective on the old , like it seems like they are new!”
“There are a lot of fantasy books”
“Wow I didn’t expect this type of book”
“The books are really well wrapped”
“Maybe we can do this in a smaller group again!”

A blind date with a book???

A blind date with a book???

Idea: Since a lot of people are visiting my public bookcase every day, I thought it would be a great idea to add a surprising layer to it. The idea is to collect around 20 books from different genres and concepts, that I personally think could be interesting. After collecting them, I would wrap them up in a similar way as the bookcase is structured, to add a reference. On the outside there would be some glues, that give small hints what's the book about. Afterall I would document the process, create a poster for the event and also add a sheet of paper to the bookcase, to see if someone would add a comment to the event.
